LAS VEGAS, NV (September 16, 2013) – Tutor Perini Building Corp. topped-out the 37-story tower at Marriott's Grand Chateau in Las Vegas, a Marriott Vacation Club resort. The milestone signifies the structural completion of the third tower since breaking ground just over 13 months ago. Tutor Perini plans to deliver the project mid-2014.

“Tutor Perini is extremely pleased to be involved with Marriott's Grand Chateau. Not only is this an important project for our company, but it is also significant for the city of Las Vegas and the construction industry. The 37-story tower represents the first ground-up vertical construction to occur on the Las Vegas Strip since 2008,” said Travis Burton, regional vice president of Tutor Perini Building Corp.

The topping-out of the 37-story tower took just over 56 weeks with nearly 250 workers on-site each day. In total, approximately 2,300 truckloads of concrete, 210 miles of electrical wiring and 3.5 million pounds of reinforcing steel were used to construct the 37-story structure. After completing the foundation and 3-level parking deck, the villa floors were poured at a rate of one floor per week leading up to the final pour of the rooftop and the topping-out milestone.

The 37-story tower villas will range in size from approximately 810 to 2,070 square feet and offer fully equipped kitchens, granite countertops, stainless steel appliances, and custom cabinets. The third tower will add additional amenities for owners and guests such as a lobby lounge, a billiards area with electronic game tables, and a Marketplace featuring specialty coffees, gourmet sandwiches and salads. The fifth floor will provide access to a larger second pool with two whirlpool spas and a pool bar and grill.
